A man and his pipe unconsciously caused a great deal of movement and some excitement on South Main street Saturday afternoon. The man had placed the pipe in his coat pocket and had neglected to turn out all the live brands. Result, the coat caught fire. It was not long before a thin spiral of smoke began to emerge and float upward. Thus indicating a furnace the man walked down the street intent on his dinner, not heeding the warnings of people. Soon the temperature became so hot that the man became suspicious. Looking around his suspicions were realized and he lost no time in whipping off the coat, not however, until the flames had broken out and his neck had become singed. The man's clothing was considerably damaged.

A Tennessee Comedy.

A comedy entering upon its twelfth successive season must have merit. The New York Herald had the following, concerning "A Romance of Coon Hollow" when it was produced at the Fourteenth Street Theatre in September, 1894: "It is styled a romantic comedy but it has a melodramatic flavor, being provided with thrilling incidents and exciting situations, and embracing some very realistic mechanical effects which served to enthrall the spectators. The piece was well staged, with every attention paid to detail. The audience was very friendly, and the play was well pleased with what they saw and heard may be inferred from the heartiness and frequency of the applause bestowed, and by the recalls with which the leading performers were favored during the evening. These scenes representing 'Coon Hollow,' the standard race, and the cotton gin press in operation were very realistic, and elicited merited applause, while the negro dances and choruses in the third act awoke the audience to enthusiasm. Some very beautiful and novel electrical effects were introduced. 'Coon Hollow' with the original New York scenery, including a troupe of colored dancers and singers is announced for next Wednesday evening at the opera house. Tickets Monday night.
